Strays Jul 30 2020 This world is cruel and cold. Those who stand above the crowd are always hunted down. It's easier for adults: they know the rules of the game, they can hide, disguise themselves, avoid giving themselves away. Children, who don't even know that those rules exist, have nowhere to hide. In particular, those children whose special abilities cannot be explained by the modern science. They can break through sheet steel and crush reinforced concrete blocks but they are helpless in face of the indifferent bureaucratic machine that grinds their lives up into dust. Technology is needed to produce weapons, first and foremost - and if such technology doesn't exist, it must be created. Even if the price is as high as torturing ten-year-old children. Those trapped in secret laboratories cannot escape. They are kept in dark cells, administered poisonous drugs and forced to wear blockirator collars. They are brought to 'test benches' that are indistinguishable from torture devices. Children turn into deviants between the ages of eight and ten, and if they are unable to consciously help the military in creating new weapons, so much the worse for them. There is no hope for anyone: even the parents cannot protect their child from the Special Guardianship Act. And orphans...who ever cares about orphans!And even those, who miraculously escaped from terrible laboratories of the Institute of Man and did not die of poison, hunger and illnesses, could not possibly survive anyway. Detectives have tracked them down, and a special unit is already on its way to a long-deserted hotel in an old maron grove on the outskirts of a southern seaside city. The hotel that is about to witness the final act of a protracted tragedy.She is thirteen. Her name is Karina. She is a deviant. She has already forgotten the faces of her long-dead parents. And she has no future - unless a young couple she has just happened upon, somehow succeeds to protect her from the cold cruel world...

Academic Paper from the year 2017 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Region: Near East, Near Orient, grade: MA, Oklahoma State University, language: English, abstract: Radical changes in the world in the late 20th century to a large extent reflected in the political process in African countries. This process - is the ambiguous, contradictory, very diverse in methods, content and results depending on sociohistorical specificity of a particular country. Geographical, historical, cultural and ethnic diversity of the African continent defined the specificity of the political development of the individual states. The African continent presents a unique opportunity to trace the variety of ways of the development of states, as they are characterized by diversity of the specific historical conditions, different level of socio-economic and geo-political evolution. Sudan, belonging to three regions - the Arab world, North-East and sub-Saharan Africa - makes it possible to identify both general and specific features of the political development. This factor gives the study the relevance, as well as scientific and practical significance.

Straws In the Wind: Collected Work Volume I: 1938-1967 Nov 21 2019 John Thompson was part of the vibrant, post-modern, New York literary scene of the nineteen fifties, sixties, and seventies. That scene was famously fueled by love, liquor, food, and parties, but most of all by ideas, by words, serious and witty, spoken and written. Thompson's writing embodies the spirit of the times, and naturally so, as he was a close friend and colleague of many of the other prominent literary and publishing figures of the era. These two volumes of Thompson's collected work include his essays, book reviews, and stories, as well as poems, some previously unpublished. The pieces are clever and beautifully written; many of them resonate with current issues of race, climate change, war, and economic disparity. The early stories are especially moving. The works trace the development of Thompson's thinking and are thus an important part of the post-war era. As critical commentary, they contain astute insights into the cultural movements and intellectual history of the time.
